EUGENE — University of Oregon associate professor of music Charles Turley will be the featured speaker during the UO Learning in Retirement town meeting scheduled for 10:00 a.m. to noon on Tuesday, November 30, in the UO Continuing Education classroom facilities at the Baker Downtown Center, 975 High St.

Students from the School of Music Opera Workshop will perform scenes from a variety of operas.

The town meeting, latest in a series held every other month, is open to members of the community free of charge. Learning in Retirement's town meetings typically combine a general interest lecture or presentation with a brief organizational meeting and social.

Learning in Retirement is a member-run organization established in 1993 under the auspices of the UO Department of Continuing Education to help meet the needs of community members who are retired and/or 55 years of age or better. The organization offers members a flexible schedule of lectures, reading-and-discussion groups, tours and social activities.

As Town Meetings are very well attended by members of LIR, parking can be limited, carpooling and using other modes of transportation is encouraged as well as using the other various paid parking lots in the vicinity. Guests and non-members need to check-in at the LIR reception area to obtain a FREE parking permit for our lot if space is still available.
